BELGRADE - A documentary film crew from Belgrade, Serbia, is spending Thanksgiving with their Montana counterparts as part of a profile of U.S. cities with the same name as the eastern European country's capital city.

Debra Youngberg, director of the Belgrade Chamber of Commerce, said the film's director, interviewer, cameraman and sound technician arrived Tuesday and will stay through Thursday. The Montana city is the second stop on a 23-day tour that includes Belgrades in Minnesota, Nebraska and Maine, as well as Serbian communities in South Dakota and Chicago.

Director Miodrag Kolaric said he wants to focus on history and "to find out the reasons why four towns in the United States carry the name of our capital."

The film is expected to air on Serbia's national television station on New Year's Eve, with individual segments of each town to be broadcast sometime after February.
